El Cam Students Cop Four of Top Journalism Prizes

Four of the ten first-place trophies awarded to journalism students representing all of California's two year colleges are being displayed on the campus of El Camino College this week.

The awards were won by local student journalists at the combined convention of the Journalism Association of Junior Colleges, California Intercollegiate Press Association, Beta Phi Gamma and Alpha Phi Gamma at Arrowhead Springs.

Jess Amado, lensman for the campus newspaper, yearbook, and press bureau, took top honors in both the feature and sports photo categories, while Raymond Deuroo of Torrance won the trophy for the best news pictures. Amado's picture featured a pole vaulter and a yawning cat, while Deuroo's winning entry depicted a traffic accident.

Miss Carolyn Perko, feature editor of the college newspaper, the Warwhoop, was adjudged the top feature writer of the state two-year colleges following writing competition conducted Saturday morning on the campus of the University of Redlands.

Yearbook award certificates were received by Mrs. Lois Howsley and Miss Pat Sharr.

After working all night trying to rescue a cow from a storm drain, Don Carlson, South Bay Humane Society officer, ran into a worse critter of the human variety last Saturday.
